

JUST LIKE MOUNT BAKER—When anywhere from six to 10 inches of wet snow fell in Bellingham Tuesday night, fir trees in the 500 block of High street, above, took on a Heather Meadows appearance Wednesday morning. Sunday night's five-inch snowfall had vanished in Tuesday's rainfall only to have the new storm nearly swamp the city.—Herald photo.

DON'T THROW THAT SNOWBALL!—Southpaw Joanne Leighton, of Edmonds, peers from underneath a heavy, snow-laden tree Wednesday morning ready to throw a snowball at the cameraman. Joanne was pictured while on her way to class at Western Washington college.

BIG JOB — Johnny Owens, of 1123 Garden street, had the sidewalk cleaning job as one of his early morning chores Wednesday. Here he is with a shovelful of at least eight inches of wet snow. Many citizens were seen doing the same chore.—Herald photos.
