FROZEN PHEASANTS—Les Brown holds an underfed pheasant that he found Monday frozen to death on his farm near Everson as the bitter cold and snow-covered ground made feeding conditions virtually nil for all types of birds. Farmers are urged to help out by throwing grain in sheltered spots.—Herald photos.

WINTER CARETAKERS—Bruce Lintz, left, president of the Whatcom county Sportsmen's club, and Charles Long, county game protector, threw out 25 pounds of grain Monday for birds, ducks and pheasants that fed on Stanton's fields, east of King street. They, too, urged homekeepers to put out grain or bread.
