

JUST LIKE MOUNT BAKER—The home of W. F. Baer, above, of route 1, Ferndale, took on a Heather Meadows setting last week when northeast winds whipped snow into 14-foot drifts around the house, necessitating a tunnel job to get out the back door. In top photo Baer stands with his trusty shovel outside the tunnel while in bottom picture, Baer, who said he now knows how an Eskimo feels, looks down his snow-arched outside stairs to the basement. He figures the hard-packed drifts won't be melted until April.—Herald photos.
